When a child's brain develops most rapidly from birth to age five, it makes sense that preschool would give kids the boost needed to enter kindergarten ready to learn.

With New Mexico schools ranked 49th in the nation and our preschool enrollment at 44th, Michelle Lujan Grisham knows that investing in high-quality early childhood education is the change our state needs. That's why she has a plan to make universal access to Pre-K a reality for every New Mexico family.

Investing in education is essential to creating a stronger economy and fixing the problems we face, like underperforming schools and high poverty and crime rates, and that benefits us all.
